B) Comprehension

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Choosing a school for a child with a disability is a huge decision. It is important to find an environment where they receive real care, the right support, specialist attention, as well as an excellent education.

Some children have difficulties with their bones or their muscles. They may not be able to walk or talk or write in the same way as other children. These children are physically handicapped, but with some help they can go to school and study the same subjects as their friends and take the same examinations. Other children may not be physically handicapped but may have difficulties in thinking and reasoning. These children are mentally handicapped. With these children, a couple of things are important: firstly, their family has to accept that the child has a handicap and secondly, society has to agree that these children need special schools where the children can be taught how to live their own lives - this is called learning social skills. They learn how to do simple things like: find their own clothes, dress themselves, hold a paintbrush, and so on.

Many parents think that after a few years, their child will get better. The problem is that a physical or mental handicap is not like an illness from which it is possible to recover. If they can learn to look after themselves and to live at ease with other people, then the school and the teachers have been successful.

B) Comprehension

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Children nowadays have many things to play with. They can watch television, they can play video games, or they can surf the Internet. But what do you think children did for fun long ago when there weren't any televisions or computers? Children back then read books.

Some of you might ask: "Are books really fun?" Believe it or not, books provide many things that television or computers cannot. Since books use only words to tell a story, they can stimulate your imagination. You can picture the characters and you can also imagine what the characters are feeling.

The words and sentences that are used in storytelling are also very interesting and usually cannot be found often on television or on web sites. They are sometimes so beautiful and touching that they can bring tears to your eyes.

Books also help us to think harder. As we continue to read, we ask questions to ourselves and try to find answers. In doing so, we challenge ourselves to think deeper.

These are some of the reasons books are so fun to read. Remember: the more you read, the more you grow.

Today, people all over the world take time out to celebrate and appreciate the Earth that we all share. Some will partake in environmental movements. Others will volunteer in cleaning their towns or conserve water and electricity at home. Maybe you even have some idea of how you can help to make our environment better.

The idea for Earth Day (April 22) came from a former US politician, Gaylord Nelson, who was worried about pollution and the health of plants and animals. In 1969, decided that there should be a special day to teach people about what we could do to make our environment better.

This idea quickly caught on and in 1970, the first Earth Day was celebrated. Since then, environmentalists have used Earth Day to educate people about role in protecting our planet. Earth Day eventually became a global celebration around the world. Groups that had been fighting individually against oil spills, polluting factories, the harmful use of pesticides, and the extinction of wildlife united on Earth Day around these shared common values.
